Our New York Letter.

New York, Sept. 17, 1876 Some years ago chance found me at the office of the Golden Age one afterthe presence of his nibs with the ambrosial curls, and found him stretched over the other. What a clear cut profile, what wealth of language, how rosy and fresh, and how brilliant and happy seemed he to me that day. Then came the scandal, and in that trial which tollowed I watched his careworn face day by day, as the foundation and home and happiness were being pulled from under him. Well, I suppose everybody made up their minds long ago as to who was guilty.
